SPACE - SHIP XX

The phone rang violently at the J. Evil Scientist mansion one afternoon.

"Will you answer it, Goonda?" asked J. Evil. "I'm busy feeding my piranhas."

"Yes, dear!" she replied, picking up the phone. "Hello," she said as sweetly as she could, which was not very sweet. "What! Oh, that is wonderful!"

"Bad news, I trust?" J. Evil asked.

"No!" replied Goonda, putting down the phone. "We just won a free vacation for a week at Linacata Island."

"Where's that?" J. Evil wanted to know.

"I'm not sure!" replied Goonda, "but the man said it was a tropical paradise. He's going to send us maps!"

"Tropical paradise!" snorted J. Evil. "It sounds awful!"

"Oh, come now, my dear!" pleaded Goonda. "Maybe it's not as good as it sounds! The tropics are famous for their swamps and hot muggy weather! Besides, we owe ourselves a trip; so let's try it."

So they packed their suitcases and took off with their son Junior by first-class broom for Linacata Island... accepting the plane trip would have been too comfortable.

Arriving there, J. Evil's worst fears were quickly realized. It was indeed a tropical paradise, with a beautiful white beach, palm trees swaying in a gentle breeze, and blue, softly lapping surf, and not a swamp in sight. And to make things worse, the accommodations at the resort were superb, and the food excellent.

"What did I tell you?" grumped J. Evil. "This place is repulsively perfect!"

Goonda sighed, "I agree! I've never been so uncomfortable in my life! But cheer up, maybe there are sharks in the surf!"

"That's an idea!" cried J. Evil. "Let's go down to the beach and have a look."

So they put on their swimming suits and plunged into the surf. But not a shark could they find. Junior managed to find a slightly irritated crab, but he could not get even a good pinch from it.

"Maybe if we went into the hills we could find some mosquitoes!" Goonda suggested.

J. Evil snapped his fingers. "Why didn't I think of this before. I just remembered that I brought my little Handy Dandy Hex Kit in my suitcase, like I always do when we travel."

He got the kit, took out a pill and threw it in the ocean, smiling as he said, "My special shark-attracting formula!"

In a minute, the water was swarming with hundreds of sharks.

"That's wonderful, dear!" gushed Goonda.

"Gee, Pop, you're tops!" said Junior, as he playfully poked a shark in the snout.

"That's nothing!" said J. Evil, taking a bottle from the kit. He squirted some of the liquid into the air, and in moments a cloud of mosquitoes hovered overhead.

"You wanted mosquitoes?" he grinned.

Firing off a small rocket into the air, he added, "And now to do something about this awful sunny weather!"

As the rocket exploded, a black cloud began to form. In no time a cloudburst was drenching the resort.

"Is there anything else I can do to make life bearable around here, like a little earthquake or something?" asked J. Evil.

"Not a thing, dear," smiled Goonda. "I am divinely satisfied!"

"Me, too, Pop!" said Junior. "You're the very greatest!"

"You certainly are," agreed Goonda. "You are so thoughtful and considerate, always concerned about our comfort!"
